

Is this it?

Within the context of the discussions concerning renewable energies and sustainability and the design projects that deal with those issues, this project collects different strategies how to deal with those problems. Collected in a box, 100 sketches illustrate how renewable energies could be integrated into our daily life, how machines were used before there was electricity and how unused potential energy could be utilized.

The question „Is this it?“ allows to take a look from the distance and discuss the sense of the shown solution. There is also a booklet and a pen - the user is invited to write down and collect own ideas.

